One of the cats, a small black kitten, was shivering with fear. "I'm so scared," she said. "I don't know what to do."

Another cat, a large tabby, put his arm around her. "Don't worry," he said. "We'll find shelter soon. Just stay close to me."

The cats huddled together for the rest of the night. The rain eventually stopped, but the wind was still blowing strong. The cats were cold and tired, but they were also grateful to be alive.

The next morning, the cats set out to find food and shelter. They wandered around for hours, but they couldn't find anything. They were starting to get desperate.

Just when they were about to give up, they saw a light in the distance. They followed the light and found a small cottage. The door was open, and the cats went inside.

The cottage was warm and cozy. There was a fire burning in the fireplace, and a pot of soup simmering on the stove. The cats were so relieved to be out of the cold and rain.

The cats spent the rest of the day in the cottage. They ate soup, played with toys, and slept by the fire. They felt safe and loved, and they knew that they had finally found a home.

The next morning, the cats woke up to the sound of birds singing. The sun was shining, and the rain had stopped. The cats went outside and played in the grass. They were so happy to be alive, and they were so grateful for the new home that they had found.
