Excerpt

Eden could feel the sweat trickling down her back as she ran through the dark alleyway. She could hear the footsteps of her pursuers getting closer, and she knew she had to keep going. She couldn't let them catch her.

She turned a corner and saw a light up ahead. She ran towards it, and burst through the door into a crowded bar. She looked around frantically for a place to hide, and saw a man sitting alone at a table in the corner.

She ran over to him and collapsed into the chair next to him. "Help me," she whispered. "They're after me."

The man looked at her in surprise. "Who's after you?" he asked.

"I don't know," she said. "But they're dangerous. Please, don't let them hurt me."

The man stood up and put his arm around her. "I won't let anything happen to you," he said.

Eden looked up at him and saw a strength in his eyes that she had never seen before. She knew that she could trust him.

He led her to a back room and locked the door. Then he turned to her and said, "Tell me what happened."

Eden told him about how she had witnessed a violent crime, and how the criminals were now after her. The man listened intently, and when she was finished, he said, "I'm going to help you."

Eden smiled. "Thank you," she said. "I knew I could count on you."

The man smiled back at her. "You can count on me," he said. "I'm Jake."

Eden smiled. "I'm Eden," she said. "It's nice to meet you, Jake."

Jake took Eden's hand and kissed it. "It's nice to meet you too, Eden," he said.

Eden and Jake spent the next few hours talking and getting to know each other. Eden told Jake about her life, and Jake told Eden about his. They both found out that they had a lot in common, and they both felt a strong connection to each other.

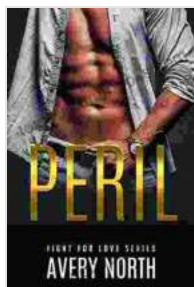

As the night went on, Eden and Jake started to fall in love. They couldn't deny their feelings for each other, and they knew that they had to be together.

But their love was forbidden. Eden was a civilian, and Jake was a former soldier. Their worlds were too different, and their pasts were too painful. But despite all of the obstacles, Eden and Jake couldn't deny their feelings for each other.

They knew that they had to fight for their love, and they knew that they had to fight for their lives.
