The 1968 revision of the Constitution was a major overhaul of the document. It expanded the Constitution to over 20 articles, and made significant changes to the structure and powers of the state government. The 1968 revision also included a number of new provisions protecting the rights of citizens.

The Constitution has been amended many times since 1968, but the basic structure and principles of the document have remained the same. The Constitution is a living document that has evolved over time to meet the changing needs of the state.

Structure of the Florida Constitution

The Constitution of the State of Florida is divided into 24 articles. Each article covers a different topic, such as the structure of the state government, the rights of citizens, and the taxation system.

The first article of the Constitution is the Declaration of Rights. This article contains a list of the fundamental rights of all citizens of Florida. These rights include the right to life, liberty, and property; the right to freedom of speech, religion, and assembly; and the right to due process of law.

The second article of the Constitution establishes the structure of the state government. This article creates the three branches of government: the executive, the legislative, and the judicial. The executive branch is headed by the governor, the legislative branch is composed of the Senate and the House of Representatives, and the judicial branch is composed of the Supreme Court, the district courts of appeal, and the circuit courts.

The remaining articles of the Constitution cover a wide range of topics, including education, health care, transportation, and environmental protection. The Constitution also includes a number of provisions that are unique to Florida, such as the homestead exemption and the right to keep and bear arms.

Amendments to the Florida Constitution

The Constitution of the State of Florida can be amended by a vote of the people. Amendments can be proposed by the Legislature or by a citizen initiative. If an amendment is approved by a majority of voters, it becomes part of the Constitution.

The Constitution has been amended many times since its adoption in 1885. Some of the most significant amendments include:

* The 1968 revision, which overhauled the structure and powers of the state government. * The 1972 amendment, which created the homestead exemption. * The 1980 amendment, which added the right to keep and bear arms to the Constitution. * The 2002 amendment, which created the Florida Forever program to protect the state's natural resources.

The Constitution of the State of Florida is a living document that has evolved over time to meet the changing needs of the state. The Constitution is the foundation of Florida's government, and it protects the rights of all citizens of the state.
