In August Farrow's Walking Calcutta, the author recounts her experiences on a three-month journey through the Indian city of Calcutta, now known as Kolkata. Farrow is a writer and photographer who has lived in India for many years, and her book offers a unique and personal perspective on this fascinating metropolis.

Calcutta is a city of contrasts. It is a city of great beauty and vibrancy, but it is also a city of poverty and despair. Farrow explores both sides of the city, visiting its slums and its temples, its markets and its museums. She meets a wide range of people, from street children to wealthy businessmen, and she learns about the city's complex history and culture.

Farrow's writing is both lyrical and insightful, and she has a keen eye for detail. Her descriptions of Calcutta's sights and sounds are vivid and evocative, and her insights into the city's people and culture are both compassionate and perceptive.

Walking Calcutta is a must-read for anyone who is interested in India or in travel writing. It is a book that will stay with you long after you finish reading it.
